Fish & Chips Adventure Cats from Canada

In April 2016 Lindsay Richards decided she wanted a kitten; her partner Lain Roby, although more of a dog person, agreed. It wasn't kitten season, so various shelters were unable to help, but searching online they found some kits about an hour away. One of them, a ginger male of six weeks old, stood out as being full of energy while his sisters slept – so a couple of weeks later they adopted him, naming him Fish. From early on they trained him to being on a leash and going outside, and he loved it.

After some months, because they both worked, the couple felt that Fish needed a companion, as he wanted constant attention and needed someone to play with. One day in a pet store, buying cat litter, there was an adoption event run by a local shelter – and they left with Chips! The two cats quickly adjusted to each other; within a few days they were snuggling up together, and became best friends. While Fish remains the more active and Chips is more of a cuddle-bug, they both love going out on adventures with their humans, who now live on Canada's Vancouver Island.

They all did a road trip in a motor home down the west coast of Canada and as far as San Francisco, often sleeping in the van; the cats loved it. They looked forward to exploring more of Vancouver Island; and if the cats became a bit tired, there's always a rucksack to snooze on!

Gandalf, the Siberian (2022)

Rescued from a closing-down pet shop in Korea in 2013, when he was just five weeks old, Gandalf had a respiratory infection, but fortunately a vet visit cleared that up quite quickly. He went to live in California, but likes to travel! Although an indoor cat the rest of the time, he loves going out on his leash; as soon as it's picked up he runs to the door and sits down, waiting for it to be put on.

As a kitten

All grown up

Gandalf has been on road trips and has visited many well-known places in the US. He seems to enjoy seeing new places, and making friends with fellow travellers and campers – and he loves attention! .He isn't so keen on rain, so has a little rain cape to wear when it's wet – but going out in the snow is no problem.

His humans were said to be going to move to New Zealand in 2016, but whether or not that happened I don't know. There's been no further news.
